

Fish Culture Technician
Scientific Technical Officer 15
Nechako White Sturgeon Conservation Centre
Vanderhoof, BC
Auxiliary Opportunity - April 3, 2019 to January 3, 2020
$26.8953 - $30.5333 hourly

The Freshwater Fisheries Society of BC (FFSBC) is private, non-profit organization governed by a Board of Directors. The FFSBC delivers a wide range of fisheries management services and programs focused on fish culture, conservation, restoration, fisheries enhancement, public education, and the development and marketing of freshwater sport fishing in BC.

We are seeking an auxiliary fish culture technician to join our team at the Nechako White Sturgeon Conservation Centre. Reporting to the Manager, the technician is responsible for assisting with technical activities including brood capture, spawning, incubation, rearing and the transfer and liberation of cultured fish into the Nechako River. In addition, the technician assists with the monitoring of released juveniles and adults.

If you are a team player committed to service excellence and are seeking a rewarding opportunity where you can be part of an exciting organization, we would like to hear from you! We offer an attractive compensation and benefit package.

Qualifications – Technical diploma specializing in fisheries resource management and 1 year directly related fish culture experience, or an equivalent combination of education, training and experience may be considered. Related experience includes experience with planning and operating egg collection stations and fish release projects, leading work activities of other staff, brood capture, egg collection, incubation, rearing and release activities, preferably with sturgeon. Must hold a valid BC drivers license. Equivalent combinations of education, training and/or experience may be considered. Lesser qualified candidates may be under-implemented.
