F. Project Description

- 1) Trout Species - Proposed projects must benefit at least one native trout/char species. Coastal Cutthroat Trout is the priority species for this intake, but other eligible target species can include: Bull Trout, Rainbow Trout, Westslope Cutthroat Trout, Arctic Grayling, Dolly Varden, Kokanee, or Lake Trout. Please also include any other fish species the project may benefit.
- 2) Project Objective(s) – Ensure project objectives are realistic, measurable, and achievable.
- 3) Project Methods – Outline methodologies to be applied. ensure all methodologies for fish, habitat and water sampling, monitoring and restoration activities are sound and impose minimal negative impacts on the ecosystem.
- 4) Permits and Permissions - Identify permits and permissions required to deliver the project (e.g. land access, fish sampling, habitat-related activities).
- 5) Anticipated Results - Identify outcomes that benefit western native trout. Include how the success of the project will be evaluated. The NTSI will fund specific projects and programs that achieve measurable conservation.
- 6) Project Volunteerism – Your project requires significant volunteer participation with demonstrated engagement of local volunteer stewards. Describe volunteer involvement with the project in terms of planning, fundraising, oversight, undertaking the work, and reporting.
- 7) Outreach and Education – Provide detail if the project has an outreach/education component, has potential to foster/generate a community conservation ethic, and/or if the project increases public awareness of a native trout species, its threats and its habitat. List any letters of support included in this proposal.
- 8) Collaboration and Leveraged Resources - Projects that have secured matching funds or in-kind support from partners and/or involve diverse stakeholders are highly valued and encouraged.
- 9) Acknowledgement – Freshwater Fisheries Society of BC respectfully requests acknowledgement of Freshwater Fisheries Society of BC funding/support on any signage, outreach materials, social media, and/or reports written for all projects we fund. We will provide our logo.
